The difficulty associated with this process typically stems from not only the variety in mathematical forms for the material functions (e. g. , power law, exponential, hyperbolic sine, etc.), but also the fact that given the material functions there is no unique set of material parameters for any given load path. Therefore, numerous iterations and difficult compromises are required before a final set of material parameters (for the assumed material functions) can be obtained. Traditionally, characterization has been accomplished through basic trial and error procedures (i. e. , graphical and or mechanistic) which attempt to fit the predicted response from the constitutive model to that...
