Gray Company Publishers, United States, 2011. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 213 x 137 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. An easy, fun book to read and will surely bring back good memories for Cleveland sports fans who listened to Tait s trademark calls since 1970. -- 20SecondTimeout.com Joe Tait is like a family friend to three generations of Cleveland sports fans. This book celebrates his Hall-of-Fame broadcasting career with stories from Joe and dozens of fans, media colleagues, and players. He was the Voice of the Cleveland Cavaliers. But to fans, Joe was also one of us. Cavs basketball, Indians baseball, or Mount Union football, he made the game come alive, and wasn t afraid to speak his mind--even when it might get him in trouble with the coach or the owner. In high school, Joe loved sports but wasn t always good enough to make the team. Then he discovered play-by-play announcing. Combining two passions, he began to carefully build a broadcasting career that would eventually touch the lives of countless other sports fans. Pluto weaves a roughly chronological narrative that hits the highlights of a long career. It also uncovers some touching personal details. For example, one chapter describes how Joe s father, a stern man with a deep-rooted distrust of black people, came to become good friends with Cavaliers center Nate Thurmond, to Joe s surprise and delight. With fans, Joe was often more popular than the players on the court--especially during the Cavs dimmer days. When notoriously incompetent team owner Ted Stepien fired Joe in the 1980s, fans protested and staged a rally in his honor. When new owner Gordon Gund took over the team, the first thing did was hire Joe back. He is the franchise, Gund said. To have a basketball team in Cleveland,...
